preparing for your wedding day

Gather, relax and enjoy every moment of your wedding day in the comfort of one of our luxury dressing rooms. Take all the time you need getting ready for the day in Room 301 or the Ruby Room. We recommend adding on a lunch by Chef Trevor Stockton with mimosas or local craft beer to leisurely enjoy as you prep for your big day.

ROOM 301 is complete with a changing area, mirrors, makeup and hair stations, a steamer and comfortable seating. This suite is the perfect spot to relax and savor a glass of champagne while getting ready with your wedding party.

THE RUBY ROOM is tucked away in the Main Lodge, with ample seating and generous room for dressing. Draw the curtains for a private experience and enjoy catching a ballgame on the large screen television.

our cuisine

The Chef's vision at the Lodge is "to bring the bounty of the farmhouse table into the refined rusticity of RT Lodge, creating a cuisine that celebrates the bounty of East Tennessee and preserves the traditions and simple reverence of country cooking." Expect something you won't see many other places—even at the most sophisticated hospitality destinations in the world. Your meals at the Lodge are uniquely your own.

Every aspect of your meal is important to us. That's why we make our own bread, pickles, mayonnaise, pimento cheese, and scores of other hand-crafted ingredients and dishes. We shape our menus on the changing bounty of each season, with the freshest ingredients sourced from local farms and the best providers. Experience favorites such as our Proper Southern BBQ with hickory smoked ribs, beef brisket and beer brined chicken. Enjoy passed hors d'oeuvres before your reception with choices that include caviar on a buttermilk biscuit, crispy phyllo with country ham and asparagus and green tomato thin pie plus stations featuring our house cured charcuterie, artisan cheeses and fresh seafood.

We also work with you to develop custom menus for your group that offer down-home comfort and great taste explorations. You'll be delighted—and so will your guests.

meet our chef

Born into a family of farmers and chefs, Trevor Stockton was raised to have a great respect for quality locally grown and raised products from an early age. Memories on his great-grandfather's farm in Gainesboro, Tennessee instilled an appreciation for agriculture, and time spent in the kitchen with his father, a professional chef, solidified a passion for cooking and learning to preserve, pickle and can homegrown ingredients the old school way for use year-round.

Chef Trevor trained under Chef Rick Mace and also honed his craft at renowned Blackberry Farm before taking the sous chef position at the Lodge in 2013. Today, as executive chef, Chef Stockton provides guests expertly crafted dishes inspired by the region, and he finds great joy in working with local farmers and purveyors, including his own family's farm, Stockton Farms.

Chef Stockton uses his platform to instill the same respect and passion for cooking in his staff, and to educate the community about food preservation and learning to live off the land. When not in the restaurant, Chef Stockton enjoys fly fishing in the Smoky Mountains, exploring new cultures and culinary traditions in other countries while traveling with his wife, and collaborating with like-minded Knoxville-area chefs about improving the local food scene. He's also an active member of Southern Foodways Alliance and Slow Food Tennessee Valley.
